City of Albany
Farmers’ Market Project

Prepared for:
The City of Albany
To the City of Albany:

We are delighted to present this project and excited that you share our views in the importance of creating a sustainable food system in your community. We look forward to working together in bringing a new and innovative farmers’ market to Albany.

The primary purpose of the Albany Farmers’ Market will be to offer community residents and patrons the access to fresh, local, and organic produce. It will create an inviting environment conducive to a strong neighborhood and mutually beneficial interaction among all participants in the Albany community.

The objective of this document is to answer most of your basic questions and ultimately work together on this project in the future.

The Urban Table Team
Urban Table Farmers’ Markets is a non-profit organization that establishes farmers’ markets in the Bay Area. Our focus is promoting and building awareness to the benefits of local agriculture by bringing farmers’ markets to an urban environment. Our markets provide a healthier alternative to current industrial shopping practices by providing residents access to locally grown produce and other sustainably raised items in a personal and convenient setting. We believe that by making farmers’ markets more accessible, we can connect rural farmers to urban communities.
The City of Albany is a 1.7 square mile municipality of approximately 17,000 residents located in northern Alameda County, north of the City of Berkeley and south of the City of El Cerrito in Contra Costa County. The City prides itself on being “Green”, and has implemented numerous programs and policies in pursuit of this effort. There are currently no farmers’ markets in the neighborhoods to serve the community.

On October 21, 2009, Urban Table along with Stephanie Sala, a local business owner, Albany resident, and strong community member, discussed the concept of an Albany Farmers’ Market at the Sustainability Committee and Planning & Zoning Commission Meeting. The concept of a regular farmers’ market within the City was supported and unanimously approved by the Committee. Any waiving of fees or other activities that will facilitate bringing the event to Albany was also encouraged. Since then, Urban Table has been in contact with the following community members in an effort to move forward with the project and explore feasible locations within the City of Albany: Jeff Bond (Albany Planning & Zoning Manager), Nicole Almaguer (Albany Environmental Specialist), Allen Cain (Solano Avenue Association Executive Director), Marla Stephenson (Albany Unified School District Superintendent), Wendy Holmes (Cornell Elementary Principal), Alex Matos (Bank of America Branch Manager), Lieutenant John Geissberger (Albany Police Department), Brian Crudo (Albany Fire Department).

Additionally, on May 2, 2010, Urban Table participated in the Albany Arts & Green Festival to educate Albany residents in sustainable food systems and began a dialogue with residents about establishing a farmers’ market in Albany. Within 4 hours of the event, over 125 signatures were collected encouraging the City to move forward with a farmers’ market managed by Urban Table Farmers’ Markets. The festival was a success and addressed the demand for an Albany Farmers’ Market.
Quality, Value & Integrity

Urban Table is connected with farmers throughout California, providing fresh, seasonal, and organic produce. We have a wide network of local vendors contributing a selection of sustainably raised gourmet meats, fish, and eggs, as well as other artisan and specialty items. Furthermore, we encourage local businesses to participate as vendors in the Market to add an element of uniqueness and to build community identity and involvement.

All vendors including local businesses will be selected by Urban Table, undergo our admission process, and shall be selected based on quality, integrity and sustainable practices. Local business vendor applicants can be discussed with the City prior to admission in the Market. Local businesses chosen to be incorporated within the Market must first adhere to Alameda County’s Health Department permitting process (if applicable) and Urban Table’s additional rules, regulations, and requirements. Once permits are completed, participating local businesses will be granted a discounted stall fee. We strongly urge local businesses to be incorporated within the Market, as they are a fundamental aspect of the community.

Our Markets will have local foods consisting of approximately 80% agricultural and 20% non-agricultural vendors. We select all our vendors based on quality, integrity, and sustainable practices to deliver a diverse market to your community.

Community Identity & Integration

Goals

Each community has its own unique identity built on culture, vibe, and flavor. These dynamic elements set one community apart from the next. We aim to integrate our farmers' markets to reflect the identity of the community we are serving and welcome the input of all community members. We plan to work closely with various interest groups such as the Solano Avenue Association, Albany Chamber of Commerce, Albany School District, city residents, etc. to create an appropriate Farmers' Market for Albany.

Urban Table’s partnership with the City of Albany will aid in capturing the community’s Albany Farmers’ Market vision. The City of Albany has no financial obligation to Urban Table. However, we do request continuous feedback and support for the Market, guidance with city permitting processes, additional advertising and promotion, as well as planning and zoning.

Experience

Urban Table has worked assiduously with a diverse range of communities: suburban (Health & Fitness Day Event, Foster City), residential/urban (North Beach Farmers’ Market, San Francisco), suburban/local downtown (Downtown San Mateo Farmers’ Market, San Mateo), and work/live (Mint Plaza Farmers’ Market, San Francisco). We fully understand the importance and the efforts of addressing the individual needs of each unique community.

We have mobilized initial grassroots support through individual community group presentations, community health and sustainability event participations, and individual petition canvassing, among others. Through this process, we listen and take into consideration each and every feedback we receive from community members about various aspects and concerns of the Market. Ultimately, this allows us to make optimal decisions for the Market, the community, and the farmers.

Urban Table’s portfolio in the next pages will describe the diverse community entities we have worked with. Each Market has addressed the unique requests of each community. Each location chosen by Urban Table has been determined as the most appropriate and has taken into account the impact and benefits regarding vehicle and foot traffic, as well as local businesses.
